How Chemicals Are Exchanged in the Body. All cells in the body continually exchange chemicals (e.g., nutrients, waste products, and ions) with the external fluid surrounding them (Figure 2). This external fluid, in turn, exchanges chemicals with the blood being pumped throughout the body.

In chemistry, pH (/ p iː ˈ eɪ tʃ /) is a scale used to specify how acidic or basic a water-based solution is. Acidic solutions have a lower pH, while basic solutions have a higher pH. At room temperature (25 °C), pure water is neither acidic nor basic and has a pH of 7. The pH scale is logarithmic and approximates the negative of the base 10 logarithm of the molar concentration (measured ...

A buffer solution is one which resists changes in pH when small quantities of an acid or an alkali are added to it. An acidic buffer solution is simply one which has a pH less than 7. Acidic buffer solutions are commonly made from a weak acid and one of its salts - often a sodium salt. A common ...

Tris-HCl (pKa = 8.06) and maleate (pKa = 6.26) have a working range of pH 5.0-8.6 and may be used successfully to buffer staining solutions (e.g., Toluidine Blue O). Avoid Tris with aldehyde fixatives or osmium tetroxide, however, as the aldehydes reacts with the amino group of Tris, resulting in the loss of buffering capacity.
