On April 1, 2019, ISO New England released a paper detailing the ISO's perspectives on the region's energy security challenges and long-term market solutions to addresses those challenges. Over the past several years, the region has seen resources with onsite fuel storage replaced by resources that rely on "just-in-time" delivery of their energy sources, such as natural gas and renewables.

While redshift can be used to tell us about the recession velocity of (non relativistic) galaxies, we also need to find a way to measure the distance to these galaxies. Astronomers have two main methods to measure these distances; parallax (more parallax here) and cepheid variable stars - there's a Khan Academy video on cepheid variable stars.
