6. Summary: Presenting adaptive help in a small overlay can make it faster to find answers to simple questions, but the tradeoffs of obscuring the page and failing to predict user needs may not be worthwhile. In updating our course on Emerging Patterns in Web Design, I noticed prominent websites (such as Facebook and Google AdWords) taking a similar approach to presenting help content.

It is a commonplace of scientific discussion that correlation does not imply causation. Business Week recently ran a spoof article pointing out some amusing examples of the dangers of inferring causation from correlation. For example, the article points out that Facebook's growth has been strongly correlated with the yield on Greek government bonds: ()
