The central point of my Jacobin piece on the state of economics was meant to be: Whatever you think about mainstream macroeconomic theory, there is a lot of mainstream empirical and policy work that people on the left can learn from and engage with — much more than there was a decade ago. 1 . Some of the most interesting of that new work is from, and about, central banks.

This pattern is not limited to the U.S. nor is new to this crisis. The amplitude of house price upturns prior to 2007 is statistically associated (although with substantial more variability than in the U.S.) with the severity of the crisis impact across countries (Fig. 2; also see Claessens et al., 2010, showing that this association is not driven by a few outliers such as the Baltic countries).
