Standpoint theory is a theory found in some academic disciplines which is used for analyzing inter-subjective discourses. This body of work proposes that authority is rooted in individuals' knowledge (their perspectives), and the power that such authority exerts.. Standpoint theory's most important concept is that an individual's own perspectives are shaped by his or her social and political ...

Surplus value is a central concept in Karl Marx's critique of political economy. "Surplus value" is a translation of the German word "Mehrwert", which simply means value added (sales revenue less the cost of materials used up), and is cognate to English "more worth". Surplus-value is the difference between the amount raised through a sale of a product and the amount it cost to the owner of that ...

The fifth annual Battle of Ideas was held over a weekend last October at the Royal College of Art in West London. There was a route you could do, a circuit, up the stairs at one end of the windowless basement and down them again at the other, and I did it many times, bag dragging at my back. Each day was divided into five time-slots, each slot into 'strands': the Battle for Energy, Battle ...

The popularity of geopolitical theory declined after World War II, both because of its association with Nazi German and imperial Japanese aggression and because the emergence of nuclear explosives and ballistic missiles reduced the significance of geographical factors in the global strategic balance of power. However, geopolitics continued to influence international politics, serving as the ...

The study of fairness in organizations, and in particular, procedural fairness, has been a boon to organizational researchers. Justice or fairness (and I will use the two concepts interchangeably) has its roots in philosophy, political science, and religion, among other arenas, and strikes a chord with anyone who has experienced disrespect.

Understanding procedural justice and its impact on ...
