Scuba diving is a mode of underwater diving where the diver uses a self-contained underwater breathing apparatus (scuba), which is completely independent of surface supply, to breathe underwater. Scuba divers carry their own source of breathing gas, usually compressed air, allowing them greater independence and freedom of movement than surface-supplied divers, and longer underwater endurance ...

The Professional Association of Diving Instructors (PADI) is a recreational diving membership and diver training organization founded in 1966 by John Cronin and Ralph Erickson. Cronin was originally a NAUI instructor who decided to form his own organization with Erickson, and to break diver training down into several modular courses instead of the single universal course then prevalent.

How one of the greatest scuba diving sites in the Caribbean was created when an "unsinkable" ship faced a hurricane — and lost. Divemasters in the British Virgin Islands clamor over who gets to brief scuba divers on the history of the RMS Rhone — sometimes these history lessons even turn into full-blown interactive skits. The tale of man's hubris and how the "unsinkable" ship ...

The R30's profile reminds us of an old-fashioned night watchman's light, or as one test diver wrote, "like a caveman's club." But in the water, divers had little but praise for the R30 and its functional beam that can be adjusted from 12 to 75 degrees by twisting the light head. The sliding magnetic switch was rated excellent, taking top score in its category for ease of operation.
