The AHA (American Heart Association) stopped recommending use of atropine for the treatment of PEA (Pulseless Electrical Activity) or asystole in the 2010 ACLS (Advanced Cardiac Life Support) guidelines. There is not much information given, but that little bit of information just makes it more clear that we never had a good reason for making atropine a standard part of ACLS.

As a classroom teacher, I was largely ignorant of, and definitely suspicious of, research. I believed that researchers could make their studies come out any way they wanted them to, and that a good teacher who reflected on her own teaching knew much more about how to be effective with her students than any researcher did.
